NATIONAL THRIFT WEEK OBSERVATION IN MIDDLESBORO

Cashiers Judy and Frazer Commend Savings Education—to Boost Local Interest in National Program

SPECIAL DAYS PLANNED FOR SPECIFIC PURPOSES

National thrift week, beginning Jan. 17, the birthday of Benjamin Franklin, will be fostered in Kentucky this year, as usual, by the Y. M. C. A. While no concerted observation of the week has been planned for Middlesboro, the banks, insurance agencies, building associations and other local business particularly interested in the promotion of thrift, are taking the matter up and plan to make the week as educational as possible.

Cashiers of both banks expressed themselves this morning as being particularly interested in this thrift education. "Saving and thrift makes business more stable, if nothing else," said R. K. Judy, cashier of the National Bank. "There will always come a time when people need more money than they are making, and then they can fall back on their savings account. It is a great thing for people to realize the value of saving and, in time of plenty, prepare for hard times. America has always been considered the least provident of the nations," he concluded, "but thrift education and the things that go with it are gradually changing he character of Americans, making them more thoughtful and more provident."

It is certainly a splendid thing to concentrate attention on thrift and saving in the way this national week plans to do," said W. E Frazer, cashier of the Citizens Bank and Trust Co, "and Middlesboro should pay more attention to this week's observance. People know, in a general way, that saving and making budgets, carrying insurance and building homes are important, but they go on in the same rut without any action unless the matter is brought to them particularly forcibly. This is what the national thrift week is for and the banks will do all they can to promote it."

The National Thrift week program is based on the following ten economic principles; work and earn; make a budget; record expenditures; have a bank acount; own your own home; carry life insurance; make a will; invest in safe securities; pay bills promptly and share with others.

The special days of thrift week are as follows:

January 17, Wednesday, Bank Day; Jan. 18 Thursday, Budget Day; Jan. 19, Friday, Life Insurance Day; Jan. 20, Saurday, Own Your Own Home Day; Jan. 21, Sunday, Share With Others Day; Jan. 22, Monday, Pay Bills Promptly Day: Jan. 23, Tuesday, Make a Will Day.

COUE ONLY CAME TO HELP PEOPLE

Charges No Fee For Treatments, Does Not Oppose Religion Or Medicine

By Milton Bronner

NANCY, France, Jan. 15.—What's this man Coue's game?"

That's a question I have been coldbloodedly asking myself ever since I have been attending the far-famed Emile Coue autosuggestion clinics here.

And I have concluded there isn't any game except the desire to help people.

If he soaked people a big fee for his services, Americans would wink the other eye and say, "That's it."

But he doesn't charge any fees. Every person who comes to the clinics is welcome and every person gets the same treatment and gets it for nothing.

If one wants to, he can buy a little French book in which Coue explains his system. But the book isn't pushed on you and its cost is only two francs. The 15 cents you pay for it just about pays for paper and printing.

Also old Marie, Coue's maid, has on sale pictures of Coue in his clinic with his patients. But here, again, the price is so normal that it merely pays for photography and paper.

Like Religious Leader

Perhaps the better way to get at the secret of Coue is to compare him to the founder of a new religion. The latter wants all the world to have the happiness he is sure it will bring to them.

That is the way with Coue. He is sure he has got hold of a great truth which other men have appreciated only in part. He is sure he has invented a formula and a method by which suffering mankind can make the most of this truth and get the most out of it. And he brings to his work the passion, the faith and the fervor of the evangelist. Only it must always be made clear that in Couelsm there is nothing in the way of a new religion or cult.

Coue finds the doctors agreeing with him. Distinguished medical men of France, Switzerland, Belgium and Great Britain have recognized the value of the work he is doing.

Coue himself thinks every physician can profitably use autosuggestion in his practice.

Seeks Doctor's Friendship

One of the goals he has set for himself on his present visit to America is to interest the medical profession of the United States in what he is doing and has done. He is confident, if they watch him work andobserve the results he obtains, they will be friendly and not hostile.

From my own observation and experiences here. I would say that Coue's greatest value to people is that he brings a health gospel of hope and optimism instead of despair and pessimism.

I don't know how teachers of the Coue method wil succeed, but Coue himself simply radiates cheer. And it's contagious, that and the belief in the power of the imagination, the unconscious mind, over the body.

FRANCE RELIES ON AIR SUPREMACY IN PRESENT SITUATION

Both Military And Civil Aviation Highly Developed Since Last War —Leads Europe In Both Lines

GERMANY NOT ALLOWED TO HAVE ANY AIRPLANES

By Milton Bronner

PARIS, Jan. 15.—Supremacy in the air is one of the things that has given France confidence to proceed in invading the Ruhr in the attempt to collect German reparations.

MARSHAL FAYOLLE

Since the close of the World War she has been developing her aviation forces—both military and civil. Now planes have been built, mechanics trained and overland services open, until now France is convinced that she is supreme.

This belief has become part of the national pride. The cry taken up at the great aviation exhibition held in the Grand Palais here, is being echoed throughout the land, along the Rhine and across the sea to Morocco where 10 airplane squadrons are stationed at Rabat.

Aviation Forces Formidable

In military aviation France already has a formidable army. She has pursuits regiments, special planes for day bombing expeditions, others for night bombing, squadrons for observation purposes, balloon and dirigible units at strategic poins in France along the Rhine and in Northern Africa.

Her total military aviation forces comprise 1350 officers and 32,000 men headed by Marshal Fayolle, inspector general of aeronautics. The naval aviation groups consist of 50 airplanes and the cruiser Bearn stationed at Rochefort as an airplane carrier.

In civil aviaion France also leads Europe. There are regular passenger, mail and light freight services between Paris and London, Brussels, and Constantinople via Strasbourg, Prague, Vienna, Budapest, Belgrade and Bucharest. There is also a line between Toulouse and Casablanca, in Morroco, and between Paris and Lausanne, Switzerland.

France probably has more factories fo, the manufacture of airplanes, motors and accessories than any other nation. She not only has been aspiring to be in a position to meet all her peace and wartime needs, but has tried to be able to sell other nations. She has already supplied Poland, Rumania and several lesser nations with their military planes.

U. S. Ranks Second

The United States is credited here with being the world's second greatest military air power, and leader in the mail aviation service.

Great Britain ranks third, and Italy, handicapped by poor finances, a poor fourth.

Although Germany is not allowed to have any military airplanes, the French are a bit fearful of the German interests in factories in Switzerland, Holland and Russia.

That seems to be one of the main reasons for France's determination to remain mistress of the air.

ASSOCIATION'S FIRST MEETING HERE IN TEN YEARS

About forty members of the State Fire Prevention association, headed by F. G. Schneider, president, will be in Midlesboro this week. A city-wide campaign will be made in an effort to minimize fire hazards here and to educate the people on the subject of fire prevention.

Two of the members arrived today to outline the campaign. The others are scheduled to arrive next Thursday. WHITE MOSS URGES PROHI ENFORCEMENT

Senator Declares Bell County Wants and Will Have Right Kind of Laws

"Men should be challenged who say that Kentucky is drinking more whiskey now since the dry law has been passed than before, said Senator White L. Moss last night in his talk on the "Dignity of the Law" at the First Christian church.

Senator Moss gave a short but most concise talk using the Eighteenth Amendment as the basis for his comments. He came to Middlesboro to speak last night on invitation of the Men's Bible Class. Reeve's Loyal Men.

"Too many of these backing prohibition amendment are too much in a hurry to rush to court to get excused when called to jury service. We need men who believe that prohibition should be enforced on the juries, that guilty bootleggers and whiskey dealers may be rightly punished," Senator Moss said.

"The men who buy liquor are as guilty as the men who sell it and make it," he said. "Both Pineville and Middlesboro want the right kind of laws and both should see to it that the rich man as well as the poor man is arrested for violation of the prohibition law," he sad.

"The murder of the three prohibition officers in Menifee county was a direct blow at the laws of Kentucky and the nation. It is time that every editor and preacher speak out and see that the assassins are punished."

"The propogunda that is being spread about that the people do not want prohibition is all wrong," Senator Moss said. He declared that since liquor is not seen people are getting out of the habit of drinking, and that you rarely ever see a drunk man in public.

A THOUGHT

POOL ROOMS AND BOYS

Several days ago we noticed a young boy, apparently not more than twelve years old, in a pool room playing with the men. Not only was he wielding the stick with a certain degree of proficiency, but was also keeping up a regular flow of profanity that vied with the coarse speech of his older companions. The men standing around kept flinging taunts at him when he made a bad shot which had the effect of bring fresh volleys of oaths from the youthful player.

It is not known just why this boy was not in school where he belonged or whether or not the proprietor of the place was aware of his presence in the gaming hall. If there is no law in this commonwealth or no city ordinance which bars children from such places, we are of the opinion that some such act should be passed.

The boy mentioned is not the only one we have seen in these places. Some days whole gangs of them may be seen around the green-surfaced tables either participating in a game or watching the others with intense interest.

As long as boys are allowed by their parents or guardians to go where they please and to follow their own inclinations which are rarely, if ever, commendable, we need not be surprised if they drift into crime and eventually land in a penal institution. Kindly advice from the proprietors of public places would do much to discourage boys coming there.

The youth of our city, or any city for that matter, should be considered sacred and influences calculated to develop that which is noblest in the boy's character should be thrown around him

A PATHETIC MATTER

The above caption expresses the view of the Memphis Commercial Appeal regarding the plight of a Kentucky youth, that is here repeated. This Kentucky boy in question is eighteen years old. He is confined in jail under sentence of death. He was convicted of the killing of another mountaineer, the man on whose property a still was located. This youth was a moonshiner associated with older men in this damnable traffic. In a row with the owner of the land, the proprietor was slain. Arrest and conviction of the boy followed. It would be too much to say that even an ignorant boy such as this mountaineer is, ignorant so far as education is concerned, had no idea of the enormity of the crime of killing a human being.

This youth who has been sentenced to pay the extreme penalty was reared in an environment that seems to be more prevalent in Kentucky, some parts of it, than in Tennessee. Not until he had been committed to jail had this boy ever seen a Bible. His environment had been such as to justify his counsel in raising the question of his accountability, but the learned court and jury could not legally take cognizance of that. Another extraordinary circumstance in connection with this case comes to light. The keeper of the jail teaches this ignorant boy to read and write and on last Christmas Day the condemned youth read for the first time the story of the birth of Christ, the old, old story, but to him something new, marvelous and thrilling. No preacher, no missionary, no Godly man or woman had ever told him of the Decalogue, or that part of it which he had violated, the sixth commandment, "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

Who knows but that if this green mountain boy had ever heard the word of God preached, had been reared in a Christian home, he would have become a reputable God-fearing man and a good citizen, instead of growing into an ignorant young manhood, skulking like a wild animal through mountain fastnesses by day and by night ever on the alert for informers and revenuers, ready perhaps at a moments notice to take their life blood rather than surrender his liberty and the pursuit of what to him was happiness.—Journal and Tribune.

A Correction

Editor Daily News:

In my letter a few days ago concerning law enforcement in this city, I mentioned the names of the police of the city, and, for some reason, the name of Mr. Reese Watkins, whom I admire as much as any of the officers, was omitted.

Mr. Watkins is a man of high morals and a good citizen, and I don't believe the city has a better officer. I congratulate the council and citizens of Middlesboro for having this kind of an officer, and I want to commend him for his good work and faithful performance while he has been on duty in this city.

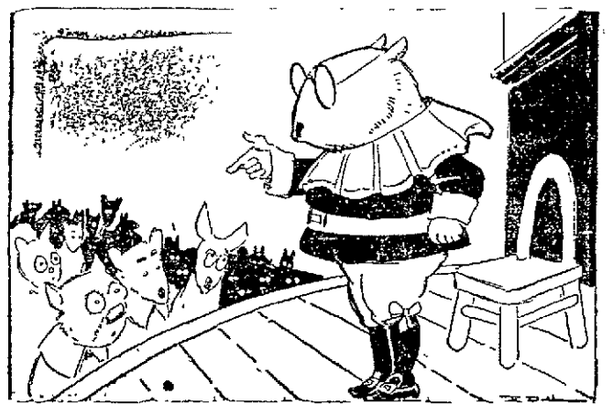
Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton



"Please give us some geography," said Nancy to Mike Mole.

"Certainly, ma'am," said Mike obligingly. 'What about?"

'Oh, about the earth and moon and stars and things," answered she.

'Well, ma'am, I don't see well enough to know much about the moon and stars, but I do know about the earth, being as how I live in it."

'All right," said Nancy. "Now everybody keep quiet," she commanded, turning to the rest of the pupils in Dreamland School. 'Listen to what Mike Mole has to say. you may learn something."

Nobody wanted to learn anything but they all listened anyway—for a minute.

"The earth is so soft in summer and hard in winter," said Mikeimportantly.

"We all know that." shouted everybody.

"Oh, hush please!" said Nancy. "Go on Mike"

"The earth is very light on top and dark underneath," went on Mike.

"We all know that too!" yelled the school.

'Nick will you please keep order," said Nancy. "If they won't behave we'll have to have a lesson on manners."

"We'll keep still" promised Chirk Chipmunk. "We don't like manners as well as geography even."

"Then proceed!" said the teacher.

So Mike went on uninterrupted this time.

"The earth is full of things—earthworms and grubs and beetles and roots and stones and holes. Sometimes itis full of mountains and rivers, and sometimes it is full of diamonds and rubies, and sometimes it is full of potatoes and carrots. These things are a nuisance. All that count are earth-worms, which I like very much."

Mike bowed and sat down, smoothing his velvet coat. He liked Dreamland, but wished spring would come so he could go back home. There were no worms in Dreamland!

"Very good Mike," said Nancy. 'I'll mark you a hundred."

THE BEAN

By Berton Braley

The Bean!
Say, buddy, the more I have seen.
The more do I see—and I'm putting it strong—
The bean is the thing that'll help you along.
Yes kiddo, you tell 'em
The old cerebellum,
Whenever you get in the strife and the tustle,
Has got it all over the bone and the muscle!
You may have the shoulders and chest of an ox,
But you're pretty sure to be shy on the rocks
Unless you will use—well, you know what I mean—
The bean!

The nut!
The guy who doesn't use it's a mut;
You will not get far if you never have shown
There's anything north of your clavicle bone;
There's many a bird who has fallen down flat
Who thought that his head was for parking his hat,
And never would use it for anything more;
Then wondered why luck didn't knock at his door.
There's millions of dubs who've used everything but
The nut!

The bean!
Just keep it well tended and keen,
And whet it with books and with knowledge worth while,
And it will repay you in bountiful style.
You know.
You will help you to better your job,
'Twill lessen your work and 'twill help you make good,
If only you'll use it the way that you should,
It'ssome thing you need in your play and your biz,
The more that you use it the better it is,
It makes life successful and rich and serene,
The bean!

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KATE WARD, widow of
DAN WARD, living with her father,
JUSTIN PARSONS, has a visitor,
CHINATOWN ALICE, who says Dan was father of her child,
DOROTHY. A few nights later Kate and her father are led by their dog,
MONK, where they find an unconscious man. Carried to their home, he recovers and gives his name as JAMES LATHAM. Evidently he is much attracted to Kate. She accompanies him on an automobile ride and as they near the neighboring town of Terre Haute, she unexpectedly asks him to take her to the laundry of SING LOY, with whom Chinatown Alice lives.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

"A Chinese laundry!" exclaimed Latham. "Can't you find a laundry nearer than that?"

'I might—but not the laundry I want," Kate spoke lightly. The day was too lovely to let even the thought of Alice disturb her.

"Can't you let me in on the secret, since I'm to 'chauf' you there!"

"'Fraid not, Jimmy lad."

"I demand it!" Jimmy was halting the car. "On penalty of fine—Lady Fair!"

"I pay no fines! Neitben shall I be bribed!" Kate met his mood.

And then in a gentler tone:

"Jimmy lad, won't you take me there and not ask me anything about it?? Afterwards, perhaps, of my own wish, I shall tell you," she said.

"Yes dear," Latham ventured.

The car sped over the road. Kate was happy. Almost happier, she thought, than ever she had been with Dan. And she wondered. She wondered if one could be happier in the companionship of a person one did not love, than a person one loved very much. Could love be, after all, a subtle instrument of torture? And were women the chief sufferers?

And was she sure that she wasn't beginning to be fond of the youth beside her? Kate looked at him. he studied his features. His, undeniably, was a good face—that keen sort of a face, which one looks at twice in a crowd.

"What is it, Lady Fair?" James Latham felt her gaze.

"I was trying to figure out just what made you so good looking!" audaciously.

"Hush! hush! Little girls mustn't flatter!"

"But I was entirely sincere," Kate said. And then wondered, after the speech, what had prompted her to make it. True enough it had been but wasn't she just leading him on? And why? Is it the natural instinct of woman, Kate asked herself.

It was near noon when the spires of the town became visible.

"Where is this laundry you want to visit?" asked Latham as they neared the central section of the city.

"On North Fourth street—not far from here," Kate replied.

Latham turned the car in that direction. Shortly it drew up before the frame building which housed the business of Sing Loy.

"You'll wait here—I'll be gone only a second." It was half a request, half a command. Kate was leaving the car.

The bell tinkled as she opened the door of the laundry. Sing Loy smiled gently from behind the counter. He remembered her.

Looking back into the ironing room, Kate saw Alice standing at a board, an iron in her hand.

Near her, playing with some toy furniture, was Dorothy.

Alice looked up. Her eyes met Kate's. She stood for a second in startled indecision. Then she made a move toward Dorothy. But it was too late.

FOR 35 OF ATLANTA'S LOVELY DEBUTANTES, ONLY 15 SUITORS

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 12—Thirty-five lovely debutantes and only 15 eligible bachelors!

Such is the season's situation in Atlanta "society."

What's more, five of the debutantes are heiresses.

All are the daughters of well-to-do families, but the families of these five count their fortunes in millions.

The five include:

Lucy Candler and Elizabeth Owens, granddaughters of Asa G Candler, coca cola king, estimated to be worth more than $100,000,000.

Katherine Haverty, daughter of the owner of Atlanta's finest collection of paintings.

Anne Grant, daughter of the owner of two of the city's tallest skyscrapers.

Jennie Robinson, daughter of one of the leading bankers

In short, never have Atlanta's debutantes been so pretty, so wealthy or so numerous as this season and never have there been, relatively, so few eligible bachelors in the social set.

Of course, there are plenty of ineligibles. Ordinarily they wouldn't count. But this time some of them are quite likely to do so. It's difficult, but the situation favors them

An "eligible," as "society" defines the term, means a man who's a member of at least two clubs; who owns a car; who knows how to dance on his own feet, not his partner's; a "nice" young man, of course; a young man with money enough, or the ability to earn enough to support his own establishment without being a burden on the "old folks" while waiting for an heiress wife's financial expectations to be realized.

Under existing conditions a flivver is construed within the requirements for a car, one club will do and it's even conceded that the waltz is a form of dancing.

THE DAYTIME MOON

The paring of a cloud, it seems;
A fragrance of the stuff of dreams,
That spectre of the morning sky—
An immateriality;
A ghost of gossamer silveriness,
A flounce flown from a fairy's dress,
A casual shadow lifted there
To point the radiance of the air,
A spectral vagrant of the sky,
The prisoner of immensity,
And lonely—Ah! there nowhere is
A greater loneliness than this,
In that vast azure dome to be
The only actuality;
And yet so trivial, transient, slight
As barely to reflect the light
That touch, that hint, of featheriness
Would nothing be if it were less—
The glimmering show of next-to-nought.
The visual echo of a thought.
Frail challenger of the blaze of noon,
Wandering, wonderful morning-moon!

Good Manners

On leaving home for an extended stay, it frequently happens that one owes calls it is impossible to make.

In such a case one should leave at each home where an indebtedness exists one's visiting card, with the initials "P. P. C." written in one corner. The letters mean "pour prendre cogne" signifying "to take leave."

It is quite proper to drive from house to house, leaving the cards with whatever servant opens the door. Or, if there is no time for this, the cards may be mailed.

TODAY'S RECIPES

OYSTER PATTIES

By Bertha E. Shapleigh, Of Columbia University

For the shells roll the chilled puff paste to 1-3 inch thick. Cut with a round cutter. About 1-2 inch from edge cut partly through the paste with a small cutter. Chill, then bake 25 minutes, at first in a very hot oven (500 F.) and then reduced, but not below 400 degrees. When baked, take out the soft inside after the small top has been removed.

Fill with oysters bechamel:

40 oysters, washed and parboiled for 5 to 10 minutes.
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon celery salt
1 1-2 cups oyster liquor
1-2 cup cream

After parboiling oysters until their edges curl, strain them and reserve liquor. Melt butter and add flour, seasonings and oyster liquor. Cook until smooth and thick, stirring constantly. Then add cream and oysters and bring to boiling point. Season more to taste and add two slightly beaten yolks of eggs if desired, but this is not necessary. Fill patty shells.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

WHEN COOK FACES EMERGENCY

By Bertha E. Sharpleigh Of Columbia University

Like everybody else, the housekeeper occasionally finds herself face to face with an emergency—inability to do her usual work, the sickness of some member of her family, the unexpected departure of cook or maid, unscheduled company, a tradesman's failure to deliver supplies ordered.

For such cases the wise housewife keeps on hand material for certain dishes she can prepare quickly.

Food in Cans

Canned fruits, vegetables, meat, fish and soups meet most requirements.

Dried or evaporated milk can be used with just as good results as fresh. Evaporated milk easily takes the place of cream.

A can of cracker crumbs, made by rolling any broken, unsweetened crackers, a tin of dried bread crumbs, a jar of grated cheese, all help to make a dish simply and speedily.

A can of clam broth and a can of vegetable soup, put together, give a good chowder.

It is well to sift together flour, baking powder and salt and keep this mixture in a tightly covered tin. Biscuits or dumplings can be made thus in a few minutes.

Makes Good Dessert

For a quick desert, open a can of fruit, heat to the boiling point and in it drop tiny dumplings. Cover closely and cook 10 minutes. Serve with or without cream.

Mayonnaise and boiled dressing can be kept in jars, ready for use and in a short time we can serve a fruit salad.

A little thought ahead, and without "making an emergency" each day, much worry and irritation are avoided.

REPUBLICANS SOLICIT FUNDS FOR CLAYHOLE DEFENDANTS

PINEVILLE, Jan. 15.—The Republican State Committee has appointed a local committee to raise funds through the Republicans of southeastern Kentucky for the defense of the Republicans who are held in connection with the killings in the Clayhole fight in Breathitt County in 1921. Between $4,000 and $5,000 is the quota expected.

The men who are held used their entire funds in their first trial, and the state has ruled that the witness fees and railroad fares must come from them or their friends, and it is for this expense that the State Committee are asking local Republicans for donations.

The Democratic committee has already raised sufficient funds for the Democrats held in connection with the killing.
